IDEX-ISP Project : PARENT-PREV

SUBJECT TITLE: Reducing parental burnout: a mindfulness and cognitive behaviour therapy randomized controlled trial

RESEARCH FIELD: Psychology

SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT (LABORATORY’S NAME): LIP/PC2S

DOCTORAL SCHOOL’S: SHPT

SUPERVISOR’S NAME: GAUCHET / SHANKLAND

SUBJECT DESCRIPTION:
The consequences of parental burnout justify on their own the pressing need to develop targeted and efficient interventions. Parental burnout has detrimental consequences for the parent (escape ideation and suicidal thoughts, increase in addictive behaviours, sleep disorders, health disorders), for the couple (increase in the frequency and intensity of conflicts) and for the child(ren) (it multiplies by ten the risk of neglectful and violent behaviour against the child(ren), while job burnout “only” multiplies it by two, and depression by three). Developing efficient interventions to treat parental burnout appears therefore crucial.

The main goal of the project is to develop specific interventions to reduce parental burnout. We will compare two different evidence-based interventions: a tailored mindfulness based intervention and a cognitive behaviour stress management program. We will assess their effects, mechanisms of action, and compare their efficacy to a control group. A second goal is to determine which type of parents benefits most from each type of intervention.
